I think the matter should be settled. There is no reason whatsoever to accuse Microsoft of monopoly. I feel very strongly that Microsoft has benefited me and everyone I know. Any inconvenience has been to the competitors of Microsoft, not to the consumers. They should improve their products and beat Microsoft in the market. The government has no business hurting one company for the benefit of another. This lawsuit was a hoax to begin with, to protect the competitors of Microsoft and not the public. Millions of taxpayers dollars have been wasted in this useless demand. And millions of work hours have been miserably wasted, that would have been put to much better use in other endeavors. If the government is really concerned about monopolies it can concentrate on the public school system, Medicare, the Post Office and Social Security for starters. And then go to all the other government supported monopolies. But I think the public school system is the most damaging of them all. Not Microsoft.
